Grand Republican Demonstration at Lappin's Hall Last Night.

Ex-Governor Lucius Fairchild Exposed Republican Doctrine and Reviews the Situation.

An Enthusiastic Meeting.

A mass meeting of the Republicans of the city was held last evening at Lappin's hall, it being the opening meeting of the campaign. Dr. Henry Palmer presided, and the interest of the speaking was filled pleasantly by music from the Bower City Band.

The first speaker was Mr. J. C. McCall, who was received with applause, and commenced to talk immediately about the "independent" Delavan convention, which he said was for the purpose of nominating a Democratic candidate for Congress. The convention, he intimated, was a cut and dried affair, and so far from being independent, was swallowed wholly by the Democrats, the only others being disappointed Republican office-seekers. If any proposed to vote for Mr. Winans, the candidate of that convention they would vote for an unflinching uncompromising Bourbon Democrat. The speaker occupied considerable time in proving this which he laid down as an uncontested fact, and advised his Republican hearers to remain by the old ship, and stand on the Republican side in opposition to the Democratic party, which for years had attempted to destroy the common country.

The Hon. Pliny Norcross was the next speaker, and commenced with complimentary references to the past military, political and diplomatic services of the speaker of the evening, Mr. Norcross briefly recounted the circumstances at the Geneva convention, insinuating that the renomination of Mr. Williams was an honest and fair one. Mr. Norcross reviewed briefly the political career of the candidate, showing that his official life had been characterized by faithfulness and honesty, and deserved recognition in the shape of a re-election.

After music by the band, Ex-Governor Fairchild, the principal speaker of the evening, was introduced. As the main old soldier came to the front of the platform, he was received with shouts and applause lasting several minutes. Governor Fairchild, as he remarked in opening his speech, suffers for want of practice to some extent, his diplomatic duties during the last ten years being incompatible with speech making. But his speech had the true Republican ring, and after wearing off the first temporary embarrassment, he sang the old song with such effect that his every point was received with applause.

After paying a compliment to the enterprise and increased business energy of Janesville, Gov. Fairchild stated his purpose to explain to his hearers why he was now as twenty years ago a Republican. There was danger in the off years of politics, of giving way to personal likes and dislikes. But the Republican party could never be deserted with safety even in an off year. To the statement that the Republican party has performed its mission, the governor argued that the old song of the glory of the Republican party was as sweet and harmonious now as it ever had been, and insisted that a party which had renounced a discredited country prosecuted the war of the rebellion to a successful end and adjusted the shattered finances of a country almost impoverished by a disastrous war, paying its debts in honest money deserved perpetuity. The Republican party was not a mere scramble for office. Office-seeking was a national disease, confined to no party. Its contests were not office-seeking contests, but the result of an ardent desire to see right prevail. There was one thing the opposition had not, and that was a patriotic record. There was nothing in the history of that party that did not call for apology and excuses. Who in this country, the speaker asked, could deny these facts. Not one. Even the Democrats gloried in the achievements of the government of the United States during the last twenty years, which were, in fact, the achievements of the Republican party. And it was worthy of mention that while the Republican party might have made some slight mistakes in judgment, no one could point to a single bit of vindictive legislation, tending to degrade the position or political status of even its bitterest opponents. Referring again to the record of the country in paying its war debt the speaker called attention to the fact that in spite of the opposition of the Democratic party to this payment the credit of the United States was better than that of any other country on the face of the globe.

Owing to the commercial prosperity of the country, brought about by the financial policy of the Republican party, immigration was invited and foreigners came to our shores in vast numbers to help develop the country; and the consequence was that a better state of things for poor and rich existed in the United States than in any other country.

The speaker proceeded to analyze some of the criticisms made by Democrats on the Republican party and its actions. The River and Harbor bill, recently passed, he first considered, and handled it somewhat tenderly. He had not examined it enough to know whether some of its appropriations were unnecessary or not. He had heard that this was the case, but had never received a satisfactory answer to the question. Are there any serious items in that bill which should have been omitted? He admitted that Congressman Williams might have made a mistake in voting for the bill, but denied that even were this so, there was any opportunity for the congressman to benefit his own pocket-book a particle by his vote; and supposing that he voted under a misapprehension, it should be remembered that congressmen are fallible and not worthy of condemnation if they made a mistake or two in a public career as long as that of Mr. Williams. But Wisconsin ought not to complain, seeing that it secured through its representatives in Congress one twenty-third of the whole amount of nineteen millions appropriated by that bill. But now that the Democrats were making such an ado about the passage of this bill, the speaker called attention to the fact that more Democratic than Republican Senators voted for it. The fact was that every harbor and river in the country ought to be improved and made as perfect as possible. This principle being conceded, the only question was as to the amount of the appropriation. It was simply a question of judgment, and the motives of neither the representatives nor the President should be condemned because the one had voted for the bill and the other had vetoed it. The congressman undoubtedly voted for the bill conscientiously, and this President as conscientiously vetoed it.

The speaker referred to the disgraceful of so much whiskey being drunk on the Garfield funeral train, and contended that it was a mistake, and that it was better to vote in favor of paying this bill, even though it contained this obnoxious item rather than to make a public scandal by voting against it.

It had been said that there were dishonest men in the Republican party. So there were among all sorts and conditions of men, but the speaker insisted that the Republican party never failed to prosecute its dishonest office holders who prostituted their position to purposes of private gain. The party never sought to conceal wrong and fraud within its ranks, and pointed to the recent star route prosecution in corroboration.

The speaker showed the absurdity of the democratic cry about civil service reform, calling the attention of the audience to the fact that the Democrats whenever they had control of a state, county or city uniformly violated every principle of correct civil service. There never had been a time when there were so few removals from office on charge of mal-administration as during the last ten years. To the victors belong the spoils," was a pre-eminently democratic cry. He insisted that the civil service of this country was more honestly and intelligently informed than that of any other country in the world. Still the speaker admitted that the present method of appointment to office might be improved upon, and prayed God that this improvement might be made.

Gov. Fairchild insisted that it was as important now to stand by the party as in the year of a presidential campaign, because the next congress was to purify itself of democratic members elected fraudulently, and it was therefore important that there should be a Republican majority.

Mr. James Sutherland read the following resolutions which were adopted after which the meeting adjourned:

Resolved, That the Republicans of the First Congressional District have again placed before us for our suffrage Hon. Charles G. Williams, our esteemed neighbor and citizen, and our present able representative in Congress. Therefore,

Resolved, By the citizens of Janesville in mass meeting assembled, that Mr. Williams by his courteous demeanor, his temperate and correct personal habits, his sterling patriotism, and his strict fidelity to the interests of his constituents and of our country at large, is deserving of the confidence and esteem of all good citizens.

Resolved, That we believe Mr. Williams to be by nature, as well as by habit, as much in sympathy with the people and all the industrial interests of our time and nation, than the world ever knowingly erred any of his public acts and is, therefore, worthy to be trusted as a representative of the people in the Congress of the United States.

Resolved, That Mr. Williams is entitled to, and shall have the most cordial support at the coming election, and we most heartily commend him to his constituents and support of the voters throughout this Congressional District.

Resolved, That we enter upon this campaign with the full assurance of success, believing that the people of this Congressional district fully appreciate and will reward at the polls faithful and patriotic public service.

Music and Mimicry.

A large and very fine audience was present at the testimonial benefit to Prof. Titcomb at the Opera House last night. The Orpheus club, organized by Prof. Titcomb and managed by him, availed themselves of a good opportunity to testify their appreciation of his services, and to evidence in a substantial manner that friendship engendered by long and pleasant social intercourse. The programme of the entertainment was an excellent one, and its rendition was gratifying proof of the high order of musical and dramatic talent enjoyed by our amateurs. Every number was given with a roundness and perfection seldom witnessed in non-professional entertainments, and enclosures were frequent.

The beneficiary presided at the piano, as accompanist.

The Orpheus Club appeared twice in choruses which were delightfully sung, particularly the final selection, the Gloria from Mozart's Twelfth Mass, in which all the ladies and gentlemen who took part in the entertainment, assisted.

Prof. Harry Arnold gave two piano solos, one an encore, in his usual brilliant manner, and was rapturously applauded.

Mrs. Conrad and Miss Hattie Dearborn gave most pleasing voice to the duet "Mountains Blue." The ladies sang very well together, the rich alto of Mrs. Conrad blending harmoniously with the clear soprano of Miss Dearborn.

Mrs. St. John was lavishly applauded for her singing of Buck's erratic composition, "When the Heart's Young."

Piano selections from Norma with variations for six hands, by Mrs. King, Miss Pond and Prof. Titcomb, received its meed of encomium. The singing in quartette of Mesdames Smith, St. John, Conrad and Moseley, was an exquisite piece of harmony, and elicited the most generous applause. Miss Minerva Guernsey's impersonations of a variety of characters, revealed an extraordinary imitative power, coupled with an enlightened conception of the most widely antagonistic characters. The control she has over her voice, its flexibility and susceptibility to change of tone, is a wonderful mastery of that treacherous organ, and her facial expression combines to give her character sketches, a truthfulness in delineation, possible only to genius. Her accomplishments in the portrayal of personal idiosyncratic antagonisms, are of the highest quality and rarely equaled. Beginning her impersonations in an easy natural manner, she continues with an increased adaptability, until she seems to lose her personality in the character portrayed, and the audience forgets in realistic portraiture, the power of mimicry displayed. The audience was completely captured and showered applause upon the young lady, to which she graciously responded. We were so pleasantly surprised at Miss Guernsey's art, that while a more extended notice of her may appear as a discrimination unjust to others, yet it is but a feeble tribute to merit, and in no wise an evidence of depreciation of talent of another order displayed by those who so splendidly contributed to last night's enjoyment.

Mr. J. B. Doe, Jr., on behalf of Prof. Titcomb, thanked the audience in a few well selected phrases for their friendship for the beneficiary, and expressed his farewell in regretful terms.

Grievances.

—The net proceeds of the Titcomb benefit last night were $78.25.

—Meeting of the Y. M. C. A. in the social rooms of the Baptist church, at 3:30 o'clock to-morrow.

—The city Council will repeal all existing ordinances when they complete the batch of new ones to be passed.

—One drunk appeared before the municipal court to-day, and was given an opportunity to repent in jail.

—See what Ella Smith has to say in another column, about piano lessons in connection with Mitchell's violin school.

—The thermometer at Prentice and Evanson's registered 61 degrees above zero at 7 a. m. to-day and 70 at 1 p. m.

—There will be a social entertainment with refreshments at the Congregational Church, next Monday evening, after the reading of pews.

—The dance of St. Patrick's Total Abstinence and Benevolent Society, at the Rifles' armory, next Thursday night, will be one of the social events of the season.

—Mr. Horace B. Humphrey, of the Chicago Times, who has been here a few days gathering points for an article in Times' addition of Jan. 1, left for Beloit to-day.

—William Galbraith, a son of John Galbraith fell from a fence to-day and broke his right arm between the elbow and the wrist. Dr. Judd was called and set the fracture.

—The full term of Mitchell's Violin School will begin Monday, October 2, when he will be ready to give instruction upon the violin and other stringed instruments.

—A little three months old child of Joseph Jasquish, died last night, at the residence of the parents in the Fourth ward. The remains were taken to Geneva to-day for interment.

—Fathers who go around boasting of fourteen pound babies, will have a good opportunity of satisfying their friends of the truth of the statement by exhibiting the cotton-head darlings at the fair in the baby show.

—After the entertainment last night, the Orpheus Club gave a banquet to Prof. Titcomb, in the Myers house parlors, and accompanied him to the depot, a few going as far as Afton, where they bade him farewell and a safe journey to St. Paul.

—At the request of Prof. Titcomb, his thanks are herewith extended to the ladies and gentlemen composing the Orpheus Club, and to those ladies and gentlemen who so kindly volunteered their services, in making the testimonial benefit to him last night so complete and flattering a success.

—The fair will open next Tuesday, when the ladies will be required to bring the cakes they propose to place in competition for the $30 prize, offered by C. E. Andrews & Co., and the two prizes of $10 and $5, by the company's agent, Mr. W. H. Boyd, for the best cakes made of Andrews' Pearl Baking Powder.

—Ald. Fifield states that he did not say at the last meeting of the council that Franklin street was blocked by Mr. Woodruff, in building his brick factory, but referred to the blockade of the street by the railroad as an obstruction which has been in existence for twenty-five years, and which should be removed when Mr. Woodruff's factory is completed.

—The base ball games to-day will decide the championship question, and there is not a doubt that Chicago will win it. A compact has been made for Providence and Chicago, the two leading clubs, to play nine games, in order to decide it, a question having arisen as to the legality of the postponed game of Chicago with Buffalo. If Chicago wins to-day from Buffalo, the question will be decided beyond cavil.

—After the reception of ex-Governor Fairchild yesterday afternoon, he was the guest of Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Whitling, between himself and whom an intimate friendship has existed for years. After the meeting last night he was taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pliny Norcross, where he remained during the night. After paying his respects to the Gazette office this morning, he left for Chicago on the eleven o'clock train over the Milwaukee and St. Paul road.

—The Horace Herbert Dramatic Combination, which will hold the boards at Myers Opera house all of next week, will open Monday night with the popular Irish drama "Colleen Bawn." Mr. J. W. Burton and Miss Millie Willard will enact the two leading characters, and have been heralded by the press as exceptionally fine. The company is composed of fine dramatic talent, and the crowds who will be here during fair week, will have a splendid opportunity of witnessing one of the best theatrical organizations on the road, in some of the most popular dramas. The prices have been placed at the very lowest figure so that all will be enabled to attend.

The Last and Tribute.

The remains of J. W. Bintliff arrived here this afternoon on the Northwestern road, and were met at the depot by a large number of friends of the deceased and of his father, General James Bintliff. The remains were accompanied by the widow of the deceased, his father and mother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Battle, of DePere and other relatives and friends from abroad. General Bintliff was already here. The funeral cortege was soon formed, and proceeded to Oak Hill cemetery, where the remains were interred. The Rev. Jerk L. Jones, of Chicago, formerly minister of the All Souls Church here, officiated over the religious services, and made an excellent funeral sermon, exhorting on the estimable character of the deceased, and giving his life as a salutary example worthy of emulation by all young men.

The following members of the Glee Club attended as a choir, singing the hymns, which their dear young friend had often chanted with them: Messrs. Clarence Clark, Charles A. Carter, R. R. Lee and C. N. Vankirk.

The pall bearers were: Messrs. Frank Shorer, Frank D. Hogsboom, Emmet D. McGowan, Will E. Ersson, Charles E. Pierce and Paul Hastings.

The grave was covered with floral offerings from grieved friends, among which were a large lyre of flowers from the Glee club, the letter W from Mrs. Burton, a pillow from Miss Amanda Bruce, and a profusion of bouquets and symbolic formations.

PLAIN TALK.

Andrews' Pearl Baking Powder Company makes statements that Andrews' No Doubts on the Subject and easily understood by interested parties.

We have never considered ourselves self-constituted philanthropists like the Royal Baking Powder Co., to make invasions of our competitors' goods through the press, or to pay chemists to make them for us, or to allude to them by name in unqualified advertisements in order to increase the sale of Andrews' Pearl Baking Powder. We do not find any high-minded, first class, reputable manufacturers in any kind of business, like Kingsford, or Daryon's Starch Company, or Rabbit's Soap Company, resorting to this method of seeking a trade which would bring upon them, as it always does, the scorn and contempt of every honest business man in the country.

The Royal Baking Powder Co., still persists in publishing that "Andrews' Baking Powder contains alum," having been so foolishly misled by Dr. Love, government chemist for the Indian department, although we stated through the press some time ago, that we made and sold two kinds of baking powder, of different qualities as the trade might demand, making no misrepresentation when the goods were sold. But the Royal Baking Powder Co. still persists in this method of inducing the public to infer that the cream tartar powder sold under our brand of Andrews' Pearl, is the one referred to under the ambiguous form of "Andrews' Baking Powder contains alum," and sustained by the analysis of the government chemist for the Indian department, instead of giving the names of the brands which we prominently printed upon our labels. In order to settle this question permanently and ascertain if our baking powder known, and sold, under the brand of Andrews' Pearl is meant, we make this public challenge:

CHALLENGE.
$1,000 that Andrews' Pearl Baking Powder is free from alum, but the principal ingredient is cream tartar and is not irritating.

$1,000 that biscuits made from Andrews' Pearl Baking Powder are perfectly healthful and free from deleterious substances.

$1,000 that Andrews' Pearl Baking Powder does not, and never did contain alum, (its ingredients being cream tartar, soda, and salt.)

$1,000 that Dr. Love neither is, nor ever has been the regularly authorized commissioned government chemist for the Indian department, as stated by the Royal Baking Powder Company.

$1,000 that there is not, nor ever has been any such officer known to the government as a regularly authorized commissioned chemist for the Indian department.

This challenge as a whole to be accepted within ten days from this date, July 15th, 1882, each party to select a chemist, and these two a third, and the decision of the majority to be final. The analysis to be conducted publicly in Milwaukee, before Dr. Martin, health commissioner, and the powder to be purchased by him in open market among the leading grocers in Milwaukee or Chicago. The unsuccessful party to pay all expenses of the public test.

We make this challenge in no boastful spirit, but to definitely state our willingness to test the merits of Andrews' Pearl Baking Powder as to its purity and rising qualities.

C. E. ANDREWS & Co.,
Manufacturers of Andrews' Pearl Baking Powder, Milwaukee and Chicago.

This challenge was not accepted, and the public can draw their own conclusions.

C. E. ANDREWS & Co., Milwaukee, Wis.
GENTLEMEN—I notice in Tuesday's Chicago Times, a communication from you in regard to the Pearl Baking Powder. I beg leave to say that the Pearl, as well as many other brands of different manufacturers, was last spring analyzed in the laboratory of this institution and found to contain no ALUM or other harmful substances. The sample used was purchased in open market; the analysis was made in the interest of the truth, and not of your firm or any other; and this communication is simply for justice, and if it has any weight it will be from its disinterestedness.
Yours Respectfully,

Are in the field with one of the largest and cheapest stocks of DRY GOODS that has ever been shown in Southern Wisconsin, comprising everything in the line of Dry Goods and Carpets.

We propose to give the people of Rock county the cheapest and best stock this season that has ever been offered at any time in the history of the county.

The proof of the pie is when it is cut, and if we do not give you better bargains in all lines of goods than ever before, tell us we are mistaken. Talk is cheap, but when you come to talk about Dry Goods, we are at home. Silks, Carpets, Cloaks, Cashmeres, Plushes, Flannels, Blankets, Prints, Domestic, all kinds of Gloves, Hosiery and everything in our line, and at prices that know no competition and defy all dealers in the trade to compete with us on any line of goods that we handle.

Ten pieces of Moquette Carpets, a line of Carpets unknown to small carpet dealers, something entirely new, former price $4.50 per yard, we are selling them at $1.75. Fifty pieces body Brussels, new and elegant styles, at very popular prices.

THE FALL TRADE OF '82
NOW OPEN!

The New York Cash Store!
Takes the Lead.

The first large arrival of DRY GOODS and CARPETS in Janesville for the Fall Trade is now arriving at the NEW YORK CASH STORE. M. C. SMITH has been in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, and among the Eastern Manufacturers for the past two weeks; buying very extensively by the package for his three Dry Goods Stores, and is now receiving the largest stock of merchandise ever before received in this city at any one time. We want it distinctly understood that for this fall and winter trade it is for us to lead, and the rest to follow. We have the goods to do it, and we shall sell strictly for cash at prices that will defy all competition in this city, or any other of those small towns like Milwaukee and Chicago, and others too numerous to mention.

M. C. SMITH.
